LightNight
Liverpool
2015

15 May
4pm

Liverpool's
one-night
arts & culture
festival

LightNight principal sponsor

In 1825 a small institution was founded that was to revolutionise education in Liverpool and provide opportunities for the working people of the city.

The Liverpool Mechanics School of Art was founded by men of power and influence who recognised the transformative effects of education and the impact that learning and aspiration could have on individuals, on communities and on society.

This small, pioneering movement laid the foundations for Liverpool John Moores University, an institution that has grown and flourished to become one of the UK's leading civic universities. Embedded within the city but with global ambitions, we are proud to be the partner for LightNight 2015.

We encourage our staff and students to work beyond their usual academic environments and so tonight you will find our students helping out all over the city, our buildings will signpost your way around the attractions, our staff will be demonstrating their research work and even some of our rare archives will be on display with one of our key cultural partners at the Everyman.

If you are interested in finding out more about the University, check out our website: www.ljmu.ac.uk

Welcome to LightNight

On Friday 15 May 2015 you're invited to explore Liverpool with your friends and family as our world-class galleries, museums and cultural spaces stay open late for a free showcase of the city's arts and culture.

Use this guide to follow your own trail of exciting events as the city centre comes to life with street performance, light projections, exhibitions, walks, talks and hands-on activities for all ages.

Our theme for 2015 is Looking to the New World, marking the start of One Magnificent City – a seven week series of major events this summer continuing with Three Queens on 24-26 May and culminating on 4 July with Transatlantic 175.

LOOK/15 Liverpool International Photography Festival also launches on LightNight and runs until 31 June.

We welcome deaf and disabled people to LightNight. If you are interested in joining a tour with British Sign language interpretation, Audio Description or have any other questions about meeting your access requirements please get in touch.
